GREETINGS TO EVERYONE. MAY THE CHOICEST BLESSINGS BE YOUR LOT

FIFTY YEARS AND TWO

Friends with me you've lily wandered, down the years now fifty-two.
Thro' the sunshine and the shadow, still together, I and you.
Dost remember on the morning when to you my message came,
Up and down each printed column there was mention of some name,
Of some name to you so cherished, but today, where are they all?
Like the leaves and flowers that perish; they have gone beyond recall;
Still the memory of their lives has been mellowed by the years,
And the record of my pages, brings alike the smiles and tears.
Here, a tiny babe was born—and the hearts and hopes beat high;
Just beneath a regaline sad, and we ponder with a sigh—
Then we turn the yellowed page and a bride is passing near,
A slight and girlish form, to many hearts held dear—
A vision rare—of beauty—scents of orange blossoms sweet—
The groom, tall, dark and handsome, and the picture is complete.
Then again my columns tell you, while mem'ry reaches far—
Of a meeting in the Court Room—and the old distinguished bar,
And fancy we now hear them, as of old their voices rung
In the eloquence of pleading when you and I were young.
Ow, 'tis said'ning looking backward thro' the violet haze of tears—
So together let us turn to the pages of the years—
Let us dip into the future," where the pages all are white—
Lift our eyes above the mountains, and behold the dawn of light;
Let us sing the song of triumph—all undaunted, you and I;
Reach the hand of help and courage, to some weary passer-by;
And beyond the clouds that lower, there will hum a brighter light—
To golde, when earth has vanished, the tired spirits of the night.

FROM A CHILD'S GARDEN OF VERSE.

Many a bird is in the tree
Singing merry songs to me
But none are half so sweet as yours, Robin Red.

February 7, 1914.

I love to see the merry brook
And the flowers all in bloom
But alas, the shadows are here,
For now dark winter has come.

MR. GRATHEWELL MAKES TELLING SPEECH

The lecture given on Monday night by Mr. Grathewell at the Court House was one of strongest pleas for temperance which has ever been given in the city. His subject "The Call of the Hour" was indeed a call which none can hear and turn away. Every man, woman and child should hear his second lecture which will be given on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Presbyterian Church. Come out on this occasion and show your colors!

Seen At The Normal

The Mallory Players who presented David Garrick on Monday evening at the Normal Chapel won new laurels to add to the many which they have worn. This talented company in giving the English comedy, a classic in dramatic literature, proved their "divine right" to the place they occupy in the world of Art.

Each character was finely portrayed the costuming and stage equipment up to the standard, and altogether an entertainment which entertains and instructs.

INTERESTING FACTS

Woodrow Wilson is the 28th President of the United States, reckoning Cleveland's two terms as separate ones because he was the only President serving twice who was not re-elected.

Virginia leads in the nativity of Presidents. Eight of her sons—Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, William Henry Harrison, Tyler, Taylor and Wilson—have held the highest office in the gift of the nation.

Ohio has given six native sons to the Presidency. They were Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley and Taft.

Of all the vocations in life the law has furnished most Presidents.

Nineteen chief executives of the United States were lawyers at the time they were elected. Three are classified as statesmen; two as soldiers, two as farmers, one as public official.

Seventeen Presidents have been college men; one graduated from West Point, nine had no college education.

English paternal ancestry has predominated among the Presidents. Fifteen were of English extraction. Six were Scotch-Irish. Three were Scotch, two were Dutch, one was Welsh.

The youngest President at the time of inauguration was Roosevelt, who was 46. The oldest was William Harrison who was 68.

All the Presidents John Adams lived to the oldest age. He was 90 when he died.

NEWS FROM AN OLD REGISTER

We are greatly indebted to Mr. W. Myers for the loan of an old Register from which we have made some notes for this issue. Mr. Myers treasures this paper very highly.

Can anyone supply us with an older paper? This is volume 1 No. 47 dated February 1, 1867.

A card in the Register shows that John Taylor was postmaster and he gives the arrival and departure of the mails as follows:

For Lexington, departs 6 A. M. arrives 7 P. M.

Irvin, departs 6 A. M. arrives 8 P. M.

Lancaster, departs on Tuesday and Fridays

Big Hill, Wednesdays and Saturdays

John Bennett had a law car on the front page.

The Central Hotel was located on Cross St. opposite the court house. Samuel Myers was the proprietor.

The Francis house was operated by P. P. Ballard.

Daniel Brock was treasurer of the city.

L. O. Schmit was in the carriage business.

George Stagg was collector of Internal Revenue.

David N. Morse advertises that he can extract teeth "With ease and dispatch."

W. H. Figg was a proprietor of a livery stable on Main Street.

J. W. Bourne advertised ready made clothing.

E. Kurtz advertised a furniture emporium on Main Street.

Green & Brown were furniture dealers.

E. J. Shakesford advertised the Webster House for rent.

I. D. Smith was in the drug business.

W. E. Luxon was selling confections and groceries.

W. E. Luxon was selling confections and groceries.

Hall and Stringer were in the saddle business.

Thomas Rowland was in the grocery business.

E. Benington and Son advertised revolvers and rifles.

A list of legislators was given. H. Taylor of Maysville was speaker.

Madison was represented by A. J. Morrison, Clark by B. F. Buckner. Estill by W. J. Moore.

What was selling at $1.50, flour at $14.00 to 17.00, Irish potatoes $1.50 per bushel, Sweet potatoes $3.00, Hay $5.00 per ton, Bacon 15 to 20,lard 12½ to 15.

Death of William P. Simmons, son of J. P. Simmons was announced on January 27 th 1867.

Later on may give more in detail the happenings of that year.

HOOTH'S DIARY

The Diary of Wilkes Booth taken from his body after his capture, is now in the hands of the proper investigating committee, having been handed over to it by the authorities. For some reason its contents were not used in the trial. It shows that he was an agent of the Confederate Government and received money from it, and that at one time, at least the plan was to kidnap Mr. Lincoln. It is Harold in the assassination. The entry made on Friday, the 21st of April, one week after the murder, shows that it must have been written imperfect agony of mind. It describes his position, with a broken leg in the midst of a swamp, alone an outcast, an asassin weighed down by his guilt, and a feeling that God would refuse forgiveness. It is altogether such a cry of human agony as seldom finds expression in words.—From the Kentucky Register. February 1, 1867.

Mr. G. A. Phelps left this week for Akron Ohio to make his home.

Mrs. Robert Bruce Stanford, came up for the Cecilton Club.

SCHOOL TRUANTS ACTING FOR MOVIES

New York, March 9—Investigation of the absence of children from several of the city's schools has disclosed that the pupils are spending large salaries for acting at the moving picture studios in New Jersey, it developed in court today when the Board of Education instituted legal action against the parents of the children. One woman received $300 a day for the services of six children, according to the investigators, and others are earning from $60 to $75 a week.

Miss Margaret Hicks of Cleveland admitted in court today that her 12-year-old daughter, Maxine, had been away from a school here for twenty-nine days, said the child was earning $75 a week. Upon her promise to have an appropriate tutor instruct the child the case was put over until March 30.

COLLEGE MEN FOR ARMY.

Washington.—To speed up the obtaining of second lieutenants for the regular army, Secretary Baker in an order made public directs that "distinguished colleges" designate 10 senior graduates from the 1917 class and ten from the 1916 class to be examined in April for provisional commissions. Under previous regulations such colleges designated one honor graduate a year. These men it is specified, upon appropriate examination, are to be accepted into the service ahead of any other candidates for commissions from civil life.

Vanderlyn lit his pipe. "Need he come along?"

Marie looked up, her eyes full of tender reproof.

"I did not think that of you, Reggie. How can I leave him here alone? You have never seemed to realize that I came back from cutaway because I wished to be with him. Even before I won to cutaway I saw the traits in him that you see, but also I saw something more—the man that he might have been."

"Don't imagine I'm asking you to give him up." Vanderlyn hastened to disclaim. "All I suggest is that we take our honeymoon trip alone."

"And leave Pere with no one to cook for him—leave him here?" Can't you guess what would happen? Within a week—tonight at the utmost—he would marry the youngest and best-cooked white girl by preference—most likely Charlotte's sister."

Vanderlyn winced as if cut across the face with a whipshod.

"No—no 'ter!" he stammered. "That—it would be impossible! She would—he—I tell you, I will not stand for it—I cannot!"

"Of course that could not be permitted," sweetly agreed Marie. "I would not care to come back and find I had acquired in stepmother as young or younger than myself—in, no even if she were as clean and as good a girl as is Anna Redheffer."

"Then—you—think—" hesitated Vanderlyn.

"Listen, I have thought much and thought, and now I have it all planned out, I must do what is just by you, yet, as you see, I cannot leave Pere here. You may remember that I told you a little about the English people I knew in Ottawa. When I say that you thought I was romancing, I said you more except in hints. I really was more intimate with Lady Verlaine than you will find it easy to believe. Her son and daughters were already married. She took a fancy to me. When I was to come home, she invited me to visit her in England. I had told her all about myself and Pere. We correspond regularly. She has renewed her invitation more than once. The last time she insisted that I should come without further delay, and bring Pere with me."

"She did?" exclaimed Vanderlyn.

"Then why not all three of us go together?"

Marie dropped again in her attitude of mock humility.

"You are so generous, Reggie, to be willing to travel with Pere! But I cannot allow you to make such a sacrifice. No; there is a better way. I shall go alone with Pere to England, and then perhaps for a little visit to Paris with the sister of the mother superior of my convent. Pere has been thinking it into fairly good French. A month or two in Paris may correct his accent. It may also smooth down our roughnesses enough for us to venture over to Washington without putting you too greatly to alarm before your friends."

"Two months—all that time?" complained Vanderlyn.

"Indeed, no. It will be much longer," answered the girl. "I cannot permit you to marry a mere agency girl. Besides, if Pere does not wish to sell out his cattle business, I may have to wait for returns from the same. It takes quantities of money to buy polished, and lots of time to put it on. We shall not reach Washington before November or December."

"Five or six months?"

"Yes. Aren't you willing to wait for me?" asked the girl, smiling.

The sudden change from meekness won a hasty assurance from Vanderlyn: "Of course I am. It will be a fearful long time to be without you, if you insist upon—but I could run over and see you in England or France."

"No," she refused. "I wish you to stay and work for the good of my people. Pere and I still are members of the tribe, you know, and I am deeply interested in the irrigation project laid out by Captain Hardly."

Vanderlyn smiled in his most boyish manner.

"I am neither an engineer nor an army officer. Someone else must dig the ditches. I shall at once go on to Washington and prepare for the passage of the appropriation. It's going to slide through as soon as Congress meets."

"And then I shall come over from Paris. You will break off your engagement with your cousin and me—No, no, sir! not a single kiss—not one until you see free, and I set the day. I am an heiress now, and must act accordingly. Besides, here is Pere with the horses. We must be starting."

You Need a Tonic

There are times in every woman's life when she needs a tonic to help her over the hard places. When that time comes to you, you know what tonic to take—Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is composed of purely vegetable ingredients, which act gently, yet surely, on the weakened womanly organs, and helps build them back to strength and health. It has benefited thousands and thousands of weak, ill women in its past half century of wonderful success, and it will do the same for you.

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Miss Amelia Wilson, R. F. D. No. 4, Alma, Ark., says: "I think Cardui is the greatest medicine on earth, for women. Before I began to take Cardui, I was so weak and nervous, and had such awful dizzy spells and a poor appetite. Now I feel as well and as strong as I ever did, and can eat most anything." Tilting at Windmills.

The early winter rains that followed an ideal Indian summer at the national capital were cold and steady. But congress was now in session, and Washington was bright and gay with the activities of officialdom and official society.

The first of the first events of the season had been a ball in honor of the superb French beauty and bellezza, Miss Dupont. She had arrived with a matronly French lady well known in Parisian society; a tall, olive-skinned maid, who was said to be of Spanish or Indian origin; and a male relative, Monsieur Jacques Dupont, who spoke French with French-Caucaian idioms and English with a quaint sprinkling of western Americanisms. By those who saw him before they had the pleasure and privilege of meeting Miss Dupont, he was said to be quite "impossible." But after meeting her, they usually agreed with the general verdict that he was decidedly amiable and "picturesque."

Letters to the wives of three or four ambassadors opened to the heiress the doors of the most exclusive official society, and her wonderful beauty and charm carried all before her by storm. Men raved over her eyes; women over her French gowns. She soon had a suite of devoted admirers and suitors, among whom, despite his enmity to the daughter of his evil uncle, Mr. Reginald Vanderlyn, was one of the most ardent.

All this had come to Hardly through society reports in the newspapers and from the chance remarks of acquaintances. The remarks very seldom were made by persons fortunate enough to have attended functions graced by the presence of Miss Dupont. Hardly's merely kept clothes were somewhat out of style, and his lodgings, in an old warren down on M street, were cheap and shabby.

There were still better reasons for the worldly wise to shun the company of the office so lately distinguished for his services in the Philippines. It was whispered that the interests for which he had been diligently lobbying since midsummer were opposed to the group of which the eminent Senator Clemmer was the leader. More openly the fact was blurted about that he had to be subjected to trial by court-martial.

It was the night of the first ball at the White House. As usual, there was a great crush. Hardly, in conventional evening dress—not in official costume, as the regulations required—managed in some mysterious manner to obtain entrance. The secret-service men had no instructions with regard to him, and considerable time passed before anyone inquired of him whether his uninvited presence.

It was the night of the first ball at the White House. As usual, there was a great crush. Hardly, in conventional evening dress—not in official costume, as the regulations required—managed in some mysterious manner to obtain entrance. The secret-service men had no instructions with regard to him, and considerable time passed before anyone inquired of him whether his uninvited presence.

He, in turn, was so intent upon maneuvering to have himself spoken to by that most genial of hosts, the president, that he failed to see Merle until she spoke to him. The first sight of her bewilderment him, and his bow did not altogether hide the effects of the delicious shock given him by her dazzling beauty. But as he covered his self-possession when he saw that she was with Vanderlyn. That young man, though more boyishly handsome than ever, bore himself with rather a sultry air. He met Hardly's clear gaze with a forced smile. The smile became still more forced when the girl transferred her head from his arm to Hardly's.

"Only a very few minutes," she soothed the disappointed lover.

"Whatever you say!" he deferred to her caprice, and drew back to speak to a sharp-eyed man near the president.

Hardy was gazing into the wonderful blue-black eyes of his companion. They were as inscrutable as when he had last looked into their depths. He tried to speak calmly, but his voice shook.

"Do you know that you are by far the most beautiful woman here?"

Her long lashes drooped and rose again to disclose the same inscrutable look.

"So I have been told several times already—I wished a few moments with you, that I might think you for your generosity. It has given me the great opportunity of my trip abroad and this visit to Washington."

"I am saving all the reports of your social triumphs," he said. "They have made me very happy."

Again the girl's lashes drooped.

"That is good of you! It is quite necessary for me to become the rage—if I am to receive a recognition from Regie's relatives. He says that, fortunately, his fiancee has become interested in another man who is quite as eligible as himself."

Hardy's eyes contracted, yet he did not flinch:

"Since it will bring you happiness, I wish him—good fortune."

"You do?" The question was almost an exclamation. But the girl at once regained her quiet composure.

"I do not understand. If you wish him good fortune, why do you seek to prevent him from receiving his compensation as attorney for the tribe?"

"I said good fortune," replied Hardly. "Any money paid him on that contract would be tainted."

Merle arched her black eyebrows.

"It is not true that he will get through a much larger appropriation than otherwise would have been made?"

"The lands are fully worth the amount agreed upon," stated Hardly.

"The tribe should receive all the appropriation. Honest lobbying would carry the bill through at a cost of a few hundred dollars. These supposed friends of the tribe want millions."

"Do you wish to deprive me of the share that I would receive through him?"

"Yes—of every dishonest dollar," said Hardly, his mouth stern, though his eyes besought her to forgive his harshness. "You have enough already."

"Are you certain?" she rejoined.

"You may have heard that names often pitch out or run into values—"

DAIRY COWS RELISH SILAGE

In Feeding Test 17 Per Cent More Milk and 28 Per Cent More Butterfat Obtained.

Cows fed a ration composed largely of silage produced 17 per cent more milk and 28 per cent more butterfat than those given a ration consisting mostly of grain in a feeding test conducted for 121 days at the Ohio experiment station. The silage ration was also cheaper for milk production.

The silage fed nearly 8 per cent more milk yield when put on the silage ration. They received butterfat at a cost of 13 cents a pound, while the cost of grain from the cows fed mainly grain was 22 cents. There was little difference in the ratio of live weight between the two lots.

In addition to 28 pounds of silage and 6.8 pounds of hay, the lot received only four pounds of grain consisting of oatmeal and bran. The grain fed received only 12 pounds of grain stover and hay but 32.5 pounds of a grain mixture of oatmeal, corn meal and bran.
